I graduated in Geography and History in 1990 from the University of Seville, obtained my Research Proficiency in 1994, specialized with a postgraduate degree in landscape protection, management, and planning in 2006, and obtained my doctorate with international mention also in 2006.

After starting my professional career focused on archaeological activities, in 1993 I joined the staff of the Andalusian Institute of Historical Heritage (IAPH).

I have led two lines of research focused on the development of criteria and methodologies for the treatment of heritage information and for the understanding and management of cultural landscapes.

My research profile is complemented by international stays (Rome, Honduras, Paris, and Los Angeles), my membership in scientific and editorial committees of congresses and specialized publications, and my collaboration with scientific journals and public bodies for the evaluation of articles, projects, or files for candidacy to the UNESCO World Heritage List.
